

Have your say on Sefton health policies review

27 June 2019

NHS South Sefton Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG) is contacting you remind you that you have until Sunday 7 July to share your views as part of the latest phase of our health polices review.

This is the third phase of the review of over 100 policies, which aims to keep NHS care up to date with the latest national clinical guidelines, methods and technology, whilst also making the best use of NHS resources.

The policies we are asking for views from patients, carers and clinicians about in this phase are:

- Continuous glucose monitoring system
- Cough assist devices
- Insulin pumps
- Secondary care administered peripheral joint injections
- Surgery for prostatism or lower urinary tract infections
- Transanal irrigation

At the same time, we are letting people know about updates to our policy for Botulinum toxin treatments, bringing it in line with national guidance from NICE, the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence and the Pan Mersey Area Prescribing Committee.

We are encouraging residents who have experience of these treatments, either as a patient or carer, to get involved by completing a survey by Sunday 7 July. Further information about the review and a link to the survey are available here on the CCG's website.

The feedback gathered will be used to help develop these polices.

If you do not have access to the internet and require paper copies of the information and survey, or you require these in other formats, please email mlcsu.involvement@nhs.net or call the team on 01782 872506.
